MARCH 19.

It is a question now under discussion, between the War Office, and that of the Duke of York, as Commander in Chief, "whether, consistently with an established rule, Earl Fitzwilliam's West York regiment can embark for Ireland, leaving his Lordship, their Colonel, at home, on a plea only of political disability to head them?"

Dr Priestley has written to his friends, that he intends speedily to return to England.

The match which is to be run at Newmarket on Monday next excites a great deal more interest than the income bill, the conquest of Egypt, or the deliverance of Europe, and the news of the victory will be expected with as much anxiety as if the armies of the Archduke and Jourdan were on the point of engaging.

The company at the Mansion-house ball were fine, but ill-fed. An assembly of 1500 persons were put to some inconvenience, as may be supposed, in getting a cup of tea and a slice of bread and butter at the same time, in a single room of 30 feet square. Sables were the order of the evening, in proper tribute to the House of Orange.

Letters from Ulm of the 16th ult. say, that General Dumourier and 250 French emigrants of the neighbourhood of Wessembourg, have decamped to Passau, in consequence of the appearance of hostilities.

The report of the Secret Committee of the House of Commons will, we understand, prove the most important and interesting that ever engaged the attention of the British nation. It will, if we are not misinformed, clearly appear that a plan was very near execution for massacring the Members of both Houses of Parliament, and afterwards attacking the King's Palace. This was to have been executed by United Irishmen, fifty thousand of whom are supposed to be now in this country.

Saturday night, during a violent gust of wind, upon Hounslow Heath, the body of Haines the highwayman was forced from the gibbet to which it was suspended, and carried over the garden wall of a gentleman adjoining, where this disagreeable intruder now lies till he shall be removed to his former station by the interference of the Magistrate.

The vengeance of the Irish rebels falling chiefly upon the homed cattle, has naturally alarmed men in the upper ranks of life. So many of his Majesty's subjects in both kingdoms come under this description, that there is no saying where the mischief may end.

FRANCE.
COUNCIL OF FIVE HUNDRED, March 13.
DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST THE

EMPEROR OF GERMANY AND THE GRAND DUKE OF TUSCANY.

Deliberate, the Secretary, read several messages from the Council of Ancients, containing the resolutions of that Council on the subject of the message of the Directory, stating that the French Republic is at war with the Emperor, King of Hungary and Bohemia, and with the Grand Duke of Tuscany.

The Directory has explained at length in its message the complaints of the Republic against those two powers. It declares, with respect to the Emperor, that the treaty of Campo Formio was misunderstood in its principle, and not carried into effect in one of its principal articles; and that the conduct of the Austrian Cabinet has been always in opposition to peace. It adverts to the cold reception of our Ambassador Bernadotte, at Vienna; to the affront offered to him there; to the hypocrisy of that Court in the negotiations of Seltz, which was the more evident, because Baron de Degellmann did not repair to Paris; to the sending of Count Cobentzel to Berlin and Russia; and to the difficulties raised at Vienna to receive the Cisalpine Ambassador. It finally demonstrates the hostile disposition of the Emperor with respect to the march of the Russians across Moravia and Austria, which are on the confines of Bavaria, already occupied by an army of 100,000 Austrians.

The Directory in the same message accuses the Grand Duke of Tuscany of perfidy towards the Republic, and of connivance with the enemies of France.—It exposes his secret negotiations with the Cabinet of St James's, particularly by the possession of Leghorn by the English, against which he merely opposed ill-disguised efforts.

The message concludes with a formal proposition of declaring war against the Emperor and the Grand Duke.

It was ordered to be printed, and was received with shouts of "Long live the Republic!"

PARIS, 18 VENTOSE—MARCH 8.

Letters from Palermo mention, that the King of Naples has ordered all the French emigrants to be banished from that kingdom.

Yesterday the Neapolitan colours were presented to the Directory, by the Polish General Kiniasewick.—All the Members of the diplomatic body assisted at the ceremony, and the Duke d'Orfina, the Spanish Ambassador to the Court of Vienna, was remarked there.—The colours and standards were 35 in all.

March 10.—A very serious insurrection has taken place in Piedmont. It began at Acqui in the suburbs, and has extended as far as Alexandria. Thirteen thousand peasants have marched against the garrison of Acqui, consisting of one battalion only, and made the men prisoners of war.

March 12.—Louis Buonaparte, who arrived yesterday from Egypt, waited upon the Directory, and communicated satisfactory news from that quarter.

The majority of the Piedmontese have declared themselves in favour of an union with France.

Accounts from Italy state that a second Russian Squadron has sailed through the Dardanelles, and has been joined by a Turkish detachment. They have on board land forces, which are to be put on shore at Palermo, and they are, under the command of Admiral Nelson, to attempt a descent upon Calabria.

March 13.—A courier just arrived from Switzerland brings intelligence, that the troops under Massena, and another General, have taken four thousand five hundred Austrians, together with the Commandant of Coire, (Chur) the capital of the Grison country, and all the staff of that army.

Forty thousand Austrians are quartered in the Upper Palatinate, and 65,000 in Bavaria. It is thought that the new Elector will make every attempt to free himself from these troublesome guests.

March 14.—The Austrian troops on the frontiers of Bavaria are reckoned at 40,000 men, and are to receive considerable reinforcements from Bohemia. Magazines have been established at Weeden and Amberg.

An Aide-de-camp of General Bernadotte has arrived at Paris, and left that General before Philipburgh, which yet holds out in consequence of the late inundations. The garrison is very numerous, and there is a great number of Austrian engineers in the place.

General St Cyr, who commands the left wing of the French army, has entered the Duchy of Wirtemberg by the Kniebis Mountains, and taken possession of Stuttgart. The Duke, who has for some time been at open war with the Provincial Diet, had repaired to Louisbourg. The Duchess intends to return to England.

Besides the numerous armies which the Emperor of Russia is marching into Germany, among which the corps of Conde is to be employed, it is said a second Russian Squadron, on board of which are several thousand troops from Russian Tartary, has passed the Dardanelles. This Squadron is to join Lord Nelson at Palermo, who proposes to make a descent with these reinforcements in Calabria.

General Championnet has been put under arrest, on the charge of having infringed upon the power of the Civil Commissioner appointed by the Government to act with his army, and having been thereby guilty of open insurrection against the Government. The Executive Directory has published the following arrest:—"Citizen Championnet, General of Division, and Ex-Commander of the army of Naples, shall be arrested, and brought before the Council of War, in order to be judged on account of his improper conduct, as stated in the deposition against him."—The Commissioner Faypout is his accuser.

A prisoner of war returned from Egypt, and who passed by Loutre, Corfu, and Ragusa, has arrived at Ancona, and makes the following report:

"The fortresses of Corfu has provisions for one year, and the brave garrison from time to time makes successful sorties: On the 2d Nivose, a brig entered the port favoured by an engagement which the Genereux maintained with four Turkish and Russian frigates, and in which they were very severely treated."

ARMY OF NAPLES.

NAPLES, 19TH PLOUVIOSE, FEB. 7.

The disarming the inhabitants ordered by General Championnet not having been completed in conformity with his orders, he has issued the following proclamation:—

"Head-quarters, at Naples, 17th Pluviose.
"I have ordered a disarming, and it is not yet effected. This disobedience is a crime—it covers perfidious projects. I give the disaffected twenty-four hours to lay down their arms. I declare that I shall then take terrible measures against them.—Evil to the rebel who shall not have obeyed! A reward of 24 francs shall be given to every one who shall discover a concealed mulket. I promise a still greater recompense for the discovery of a depot of arms. CHAMPIONNET."

This proclamation was followed by an order for a general search on the night following.

Kiniasewick, commander of the Polish Legion, set out some days ago for Paris with a carriage loaded with standards.

NAPLES, FEB. 10.

The plan of a Constitution is now under discussion by a Committee of able men. It is quite different from that of the Roman and Cisalpine Republics. The national guard of this city is already formed, and the regular troops are to be organized on a system conformable to the suggestions of the French. A contribution of 2,500,000 ducats has been levied on the rich proprietors to meet the expenses of the public service and the French army. Preparations are making to enable us to effect a descent upon Sicily. The English have lately captured several Neapolitan vessels.

MANUEVA, FEB. 21.

The French garrison here has received very considerable reinforcements, and the line on the ci-devant Venetian territory has been augmented. The Germans are also reinforced; but the discontents of the inhabitants against them is incredible. This city is in the greatest distress for want of provisions and specie.

RASTADT—MARCH 5.

The Deputation of the Empire, astonished at the rapid march of the French, was unable to recover from its surprise, when the Governor of Philipburgh transmitted to the Members the summons of General Bernadotte, to surrender. The answer was, that he ought to defend this fortress until he received fresh instructions. All the Deputies are packing up their effects, and Count de Lehrbeck quits this place this night.

The French column which crossed the Rhine at

Manheim, and took possession of it, has continued its march with the same rapidity by Huelbergh and Heilbronn, for the purpose of anticipating the Austrians, and forming a line all along the Neckar.

VIENNA—FEB. 22.

The Archduke Joseph was received on the frontiers of Russia with great solemnity, and conducted on his way to Petersburg with the utmost pomp. The Russian troops in Upper Austria are to be considerably reinforced; 20,000 Russians are on their march to Agram in Croatia, and when united are to be employed in Italy. The Emperor Paul has declared his determination to repulse the King of Naples in his dominions.

MANHEIM—MARCH 5.

The Duke of Wirtemberg has published an order, which directs that all the public functionaries shall remain at their posts, and behave with respect to the French troops, according to the terms of the treaty of peace concluded between France and the Duke of Wirtemberg. Should the French make requisitions, and not pay in specie, the inhabitants are to take paper.

General Bernadotte has declared his intention of marching by this city with 25,000 men. He has at the same time ordered 24,000 palisades to be made for guarding against any surprise of this place, as the fortifications were blown up in winter.

The requisitions are all complied with in conformity to the proclamations of General Jourdan.

ROME—FEB. 12.

Orders have been given to put up to sale ecclesiastical property to the value of 50,000 crowns, for providing for military expenses.

Yesterday the furniture of the Palace of Farnese, belonging to the King of Naples, was sold by auction.

Feb. 15. Civita Vecchia has not yet been attacked, but the French camp near that place is every day reinforced. It is absolutely necessary to take that town, which not only prevents Rome from receiving provisions, but leaves an open port to the enemy.

The Department of Cimino is in a state of insurrection. It is thought the Roman and Neapolitan Republics will be united.

LONDON—MARCH 20.

HOUSE OF LORDS—March 19.

UNION WITH IRELAND.

The order of the day for summoning the House was read.

Lord GRENVILLE rose, and went into a copious detail of the subject, nearly similar to that delivered by Mr Pitt in the House of Commons. It must, he said, be admitted by every man, that something was necessary to be done at this time, although they might differ a little as to what that ought to be, and the only way for them to decide, was to investigate the subject with candour, and by that means endeavour to search into the cause of the disorders, as the only way of being able to provide a remedy.

To do this, his Lordship went into an historical account, from the commencement of the English making a conquest of Ireland, when the natives were forced into one province, while the others were divided amongst the English settlers. Here the first animosity began, and which continued until the time of William, when a second conquest made a second division of lands, and united those who had been at variance before, from whence became a violent opposition between Protestants and Catholics, the latter of whom he seemed to consider as the authors of the various tumults which have been in that country. His Lordship next took a view of the present connection between the two kingdoms through the medium of the Crown, and went into a copious explanation of its various prerogatives, to shew that that was not sufficient to preserve their unanimity and unite their strength; the King, as supreme head of the church, might put the whole power of it in Ireland into the hands of the King though according to the English Constitution, by being one himself, he would forfeit the Crown of England. The Parliament of Ireland became the next object of his investigation, and from which he drew his conclusion, that it either was or was not an independent Parliament. Those who considered it as under British influence, must suppose it of the latter description; and he put a variety of cases to shew that, if independent, it might decide differently from the British Parliament upon the most material questions; nay, even in the present struggle, they might have forced the Crown to have become the ally of its most inveterate enemy, while it was supported by the wisdom and firmness of the British Parliament in maintaining a just and necessary war.

His Lordship took notice of the recent proceedings of the Irish House of Commons upon the present measure, but did not consider their resolution not to reply to that part of his Majesty's message as any reason to prevent its hereafter being brought under their discussion. The causes of the present unhappy state of that country he attributed, in a great measure, to the total want of morality and industry in the lower orders of the people, and that nice chain of gradation in society which secured those blessings we so eminently enjoyed; all which, he contended, by a close union, they would possess in common with ourselves. Catholic emancipation, and reform in Parliament, were mere topics of delusion to those ignorant people; for some of the most distinguished leaders of the rebellion had owned upon oath, and indeed so the fact appeared, that not one in a hundred knew what was meant by the one or the other.

The next point of his argument went to shew, that Europe had become civilized in proportion as petty governors were got rid of, and the governments became fixed as they are at present; from whence he inferred, that by the proposed Union, jealousies would be removed, the Catholics would no longer entertain the hopes of gaining the ascendancy, and the Protestants would not be envious of any little indulgencies which might be granted them.

His Lordship hoped, that in all he had taken the liberty of troubling their Lordships with, they had not understood him to imply a single wish to force it upon the Irish people. All he should propose was to have registered upon their Journals the conditions upon which the British Parliament were willing to unite with that of Ireland, when they should be so inclined.

After dwelling on several points, his Lordship remarked on the necessity of an Union of strength and sentiment, at the moment when the British empire was threatened by an inveterate foe, when there was scarcely a principle of resistance but in Great Britain, and when it relied with her alone to interfere for the salvation of civilized Europe. He proposed that the joint address of both Houses should be postponed till after the holidays, and concluded by moving, "that the House do concur in the resolutions transmitted from the Commons."

Earl FITZWILLIAM said, he should only say, that he thought the question ill-timed. The Noble Secretary had ascribed the discontents of Ireland, in a great degree, to the disunion of the ranks of society in that unhappy country; he should therefore ask if this measure was calculated to conciliate that disunion at this time?—The Noble Secretary had alluded to the Roman Catholics of Ireland; but he had not thrown out any thing which might lead that body to look up for any advantage which they might derive from an Union. He looked with shame, because he was a Member of that House, to see benches bare which ought to be occupied by the Catholic party of this kingdom.

Alluding to his administration in Ireland, he would now declare in his place, in the face of that House, and his country, that he was not desirous to retract any thing that he was instructed to perform, and that he was also requested to avoid the question of the Catholic Emancipation. To this last he made a full, fair, and unqualified protest and declaration, that if the question of Catholic Emancipation should be brought forward from any other quarter, that it should have his full support; on these grounds he was permitted to assume the Government of that kingdom. When he arrived there, he found the Government so entangled, that it was necessary that his concession was the only means of relieving it; and as it was intended to be brought forward from another quarter, he, in support of his declaration, intended to recur to it. The Noble Secretary had deprecated all ideas of force and intimidation with regard to the question of an Union—would their Lordships look to the present situation of Ireland, when the whole country was laid under martial law. If a general election should take place under these circumstances, could the hundred Irish Members, proposed to be added to the House of Commons of Great Britain, be called the Representative of free Electors? No; men thus returned at the point of the bayonet, know they should be rather considered as the Representatives of the military.—He did not think, therefore, that any benefit could be derived from the agitation of this question at present.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE, in an argumentative speech, supported the necessity of an Union between the two kingdoms. He entered into an historical retrospect of the existing troubles in that unhappy country, with their causes, which he attributed entirely to the misadministration of the British Cabinet. During Earl Fitzwilliam's short administration of three months, he had thrown oil upon the turbulent sea; every thing wore the appearance of returning tranquillity, and he gured well to the reciprocal happiness of both countries, when the Lord Lieutenant was recalled. The remainder of the year 1795, after Earl Fitzwilliam's recall, presented a calamitous scene of disturbance and confusion. In 1796, the system of coercion was carried to a more formidable extent. To this the evils and miseries which had befallen Ireland ought to be ascribed. It was in consequence of the unprecedented rigour towards the Irish that they had been driven to insurrection and rebellion. To this it was owing, that in May 1796 negotiations were carried on between the United Kingdom and France. The Irish Ambassador had been graciously received by the Directory, and a treaty of alliance offensive as well as defensive concluded, which probably was in existence at this very moment. The consequence of this alliance soon became apparent, in an armament fitted out by France for the invasion of Ireland. In 1798, that invasion actually took place. In the present year 1799, we were told from the highest authorities that an Irish Executive Directory, co-operating with France, and acting under a promise of assistance from that power, was still actually sitting in Ireland.

His Lordship reprobated in strong terms the proceedings of the Irish Parliament in the case of Lord Fitzgerald in passing a bill of attainder against his family. From this his Lordship took occasion to pass the highest and most comprehensive upon the British Constitution and the trial by jury. In the case of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, the Parliament of Ireland had been instigated by a violent spirit to pass a bill of attainder after his death against his innocent children, who, from their tender years, were physically incapable of incurring guilt. By this bill of attainder the innocent creditors of Lord Fitzgerald had likewise been defrauded. And what rendered the act still more offensive was, that the Irish Parliament had the confidence to vote this attainder against innocent persons, at the moment pardons were granted to the most guilty rebels. In such a state of affairs, the measure of an Union seemed to the Noble Marquis indispensably necessary for the national salvation; but at the same time he wished it to be fairly carried. He wished it to be brought about with the concurrence of the Irish nation; and not forced down by corruption and intimidation.—He concluded with giving his support to the measure, which, he said, would render the kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland two inseparable rocks in the bosom of the ocean. He added from principle, and however his sentiments might be misconstrued, he should enjoy the satisfaction of self approbation.

Earl CAMPDEN vindicated the measures which had been pursued under his administration, from the charge of wanton cruelty and rigour. Severity had not been exercised, except in cases where it was unavoidable, and whenever information had been received of outrages and excesses committed by the military, they became the subject of enquiry; and, if substantiated, of punishment.

Lord TOWNSEND wished the Catholic clergy to be resident, and that the religious instruction of the peasantry should be better attended to, as no Government or no Constitution could possibly exist without religion.

Lord DANKLEY would have preferred waiting the discussion altogether, after the manner in which the question had been met by the Irish Parliament. Englishmen, he observed, knew almost as little of Ireland as they did of China. He declared himself averse to the Union, as long as it did not meet the approbation of the Irish.

Lord HOSART vindicated the character of the Irish Parliament.

Earl MOIRA was utterly averse to the measure. Ireland had been reduced to its present state by the Calumny of this country, and an union of the nature of the now proposed would not heal its sores. He had long told, that if concessions were not made to the Catholics a spirit of discontent would manifest itself. Unfortunately he was not believed. When coercion, (strangely whipping, and burning of houses were referred to, he had predicted that these outrages would drive the Irish to open rebellion; still he was not believed. His painful experience of the past only served to confirm him more strongly in the opinion he had so repeatedly avowed, that nothing but conciliation and liberal treatment would appease the troubles in Ireland. He could not admit the competency of any Government to con-

...the aggregate will of a nation. Much odium had been thrown upon the phrase, "the Sovereignty of the People," but it ought to be remembered, that it was upon this tenure alone that the present Royal Family has been placed upon the throne.

It had been attempted to degrade the sovereignty of the people, by pretending that it was synonymous to the French doctrine of equality. But this was a scandalous perversion of its meaning. He concluded with declaring his decided opposition to the measure.

Lord Holland was an advocate for the Parliamentary Independence of Ireland, and consequently averse to the Union.

Lord Kinsland vindicated the conduct of Ministers; and earnestly recommended the adoption of the Union, as necessary for the peace and security of both countries. The Earl of Carlisle followed on a similar ground.

The Earl of Westmoreland strenuously defended the conduct of the Government of Ireland, both in his own time and that of his successors.

The motion was then put and carried.—Adjourned at half past three o'clock.

Two Hamburg mails are now due.

On Tuesday no business of importance was done in the House of Commons.

Mrs Fitzherbert arrived on Friday evening at Lord Westworth's house, in Seymour street, from Bath, but not much benefited by those waters.

Monday afternoon Prince Edward left town for Winchester; the Prince having with him one servant following, one of the men in the carriage, or he would blow out his brains; the servant acquiesced, but he would not leave his horse. The highwaymen on approaching the carriage, ordered the post-boys to stop. They were informed by Captain Smith, that the family whom he accompanied would never be interrupted by any person on the road. The post-boys drove on, and the Captain with a pistol in his hand, held it out of the window, threatening to fire, on which the highwaymen set spurs to their horses, and after the footman had fired at them, rode off to the right of Langley Broom. The Prince, on arriving at Windsor, gave each of the post-boys a guinea.

NEW NAVAL APPOINTMENTS.

Mr T. Paisley, Plymouth, vice Sir R. King, ditto. Mr J. Lutwidge, Dover, vice Thompson, to Cork. Mr J. Berkeley, Chatham, vice Thompson, to Cork. Mr J. Duckworth, Mediterranean, to hoist his flag. Since dead at Portsmouth.

MARRIED.

By special licence, on the 10th inst. at Mountstewart, Ireland, Major-General Lord Chas. Fitzroy, son to the Duke of Orléans, to Lady Francis Stewart, daughter to the Earl of Londonderry. The ceremony was performed by the Lord Bishop of Clogher.

DIED.

Monday at Fetham, Sir Charles Thompson, Baronet, Vice Admiral of the Red. His health had been on the decline ever since he had the station of the island of St Domingo, where many thousands Britons have perished: He was extremely ill during the whole of his last cruise off Brest, and survived only a few days after imminent danger of dissolution had occasioned him to be superseded by Lord Hugh Seymour.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—March 20.

COLD BATHFIELDS PRISON.

Sir FRANCIS BURDET said, he had a motion to make, but it was not necessary to take up much of the time of the House with previous observations. Col. Despard had written to the Committee appointed to enquire into the treatment of the prisoners in Cold Bath Fields gaol, requesting, that he and witnesses whom he was ready to produce, might be examined. This had come to the knowledge of the Governor, who seized Colonel Despard by the collar, threw him down, and took his pocket-book from him, saying, "you damned rascal, you have been communicating again." He then moved that it be an instruction to the Committee to visit the said prison.

Mr PITT objected to the motion in any form. The Committee already possessed every necessary power, and if there were any occasion for an instruction, it would require another kind of a statement to support it than that which had been just made to the House.

Mr HOBHOUSE stated, that it was in the contemplation of the Committee to visit the prison.

The motion was withdrawn.

On the 18th inst. the Lady Leys, Lyon, of Hull, and Lively, Ratt, of Aberdeen, were captured off Flamborough Head by a French cutter-built privateer armed with 16 guns, and afterwards retaken by the Eagle revenue cutter. It is said several other vessels have been taken.

The Continental news has now become extremely interesting. The French Directory has declared war against the Emperor, and also against the Grand Duke of Tuscany. Hostilities, according to one account, are already commenced in the country of the Grisons, on the borders of Switzerland, where the French claim a victory. In a few days we may expect to hear of an action between Jourdan's army, and that under the Archduke Charles. The campaigns that have past have been woefully destructive to the human species, and that now commenced is still more dreadful in its aspect.

Regarding the present situation of the affairs on the Continent, the London paper, the Sun, makes the following observations:

The letters from Strasbourg inform us, that the French troops were every where in motion along the Rhine, from Balle to the Meise. General FERRIN, who commands the right wing of the central army, under the command in chief of General Jourdan, passed the Rhine, at Balle and at Huningen, on the 1st inst. and must not doubt have advanced through the frontier towns. The head-quarters of General Jourdan were on the 4th at Gegenbach—his object must be, to make himself master of all the roads to the Black Forest and to Swabia, and to be on the other side of the mountains which divide that country, before the Archduke Charles could meet him. The left wing of Jourdan's army, commanded by General Sir Cyr, has invaded Philippsburgh, after having taken possession of Mannheim, with as much ease, and in the same manner as Pichegru made himself master of it in 1795. We must not therefore be surprised at the French taking the first advanced posts; we were prepared to hear of that event, and we may expect to see them continue their progress until they meet with the Austrian troops, either those of the army of Tyrol, or the army of the Archduke, who will certainly have proceeded with the utmost dispatch towards the important point of Ulm.

According to an order of the Directory, all the French troops who are stationed on the frontiers of the country of the Grisons as far as the banks of the Lake, are formed into one army, of which Jourdan is to be the Commander in Chief; the right of this army, under the title of Helvetia, is under the order of Massena, and the left, under the title of the Army of Observation, is commanded by Bernadotte. We see with pleasure the chief command is given to Jourdan, that one of all the Republican Generals, to whom we should ourselves have been most inclined to have allotted it; a General who has had so little good fortune in war, and has shown so little ability, that we may reasonably hope that the Archduke will have the same advantage of him in 1799 as in 1796.

Our readers will perceive that the Cabinet of Vienna has not been as tardy in military preparations as it was in its diplomatic communications, and that it has ferociously applied to the defence of the Tyrol, a country on the preservation of which depends the safety of the hereditary dominions of the House of Austria, and its now possessions in Italy. The acknowledged valour of the Tyrolese, and their attachment to their Sovereign, lead us to entertain strong hopes of them when in arms.

The Directory, in contemplation of the renewal of hostilities, but previously to their actual declaration of war, published an address to the French people, on the subject of the convocation of the Primary Assemblies, in which, according to custom, they endeavour to guard them against the intrigues both of the royalists and anarchists. These two parties are the Scylla and Charibdis of the Directory, between which they have flattered with success for eighteen months; but of one of the other of which they can hardly avoid being the victim.

The London papers received this morning contain a long debate upon the affairs of Ireland, but are otherwise without any intelligence of importance.

We understand, that all the established regiments of fencible infantry in North Britain, are to be called upon to extend their services to Ireland or Europe, without any additional bounty to the men; and, if they decline to do so, are to be disbanded by the 24th of next month; in which case, the regiments of the line are to offer the full bounty to the men, and inlist as many of them as they can; and that the Angus, Ross-shire, and Shetland corps, are not allowed the alternative of extending their services, and will, of course, be disbanded. By T. PRESTON, No. 97, Strand, London; And G. THOMSON, No. 16, Terrace, Edinburgh.

THE THIRD AND FOURTH BOOKS OF SCOTCH SONGS, WITH SYMPHONIES AND ACCOMPANIMENTS, BY KOZELUCH AND PLEYEL.

THE POETRY BY BURNS, &c.

The leading object of this work has been to collect all the best and most approved Scotch Airs, with a view to form a pure and standard Repository of that admired Music, including the most favourite lyrics.

The next object was to procure delicate Accompaniments to those Airs, and characteristic Symphonies to introduce and conclude each Air, for the Piano-Forte and Violin. The Editor has the satisfaction of presenting these, composed in the most exquisite style, with many of the Airs arranged for two voices, by the celebrated PLEYEL and KOZELUCH.

The POETRY has been equally the object of attention, and will be found worthy of the Music. All the delightful and interesting Songs of BURNS are here presented, among which are FIFTY NEVER BEFORE PUBLISHED, written expressly for this Work; and these being the Editor's exclusive property, none of them can elsewhere be set to Music.

To render the Work alike interesting in England as in Scotland, a set of excellent Songs, purely English, suited to the Scotch Airs, are given in addition to the Songs in the Scottish dialect. And the Editor flatters himself it will be found, on examination, that a work more complete and perfect in all its parts, has never been offered to the Public.

Price of each Book 10s 6d.—Those yet subscribing to G. THOMSON for the four, will be presented with two elegant Engravings for embellishing the Work. To non-subscribers the Prints will be 8s.

PLEYEL'S SIX SONATAS with Scotch Airs for the Piano-Forte may be had as above. All other Sonatas of this kind, published in Pleyel's name, are spurious.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—March 20.

COLD BATHFIELDS PRISON.

Sir FRANCIS BURDET said, he had a motion to make, but it was not necessary to take up much of the time of the House with previous observations. Col. Despard had written to the Committee appointed to enquire into the treatment of the prisoners in Cold Bath Fields gaol, requesting, that he and witnesses whom he was ready to produce, might be examined. This had come to the knowledge of the Governor, who seized Colonel Despard by the collar, threw him down, and took his pocket-book from him, saying, "you damned rascal, you have been communicating again." He then moved that it be an instruction to the Committee to visit the said prison.

Mr PITT objected to the motion in any form. The Committee already possessed every necessary power, and if there were any occasion for an instruction, it would require another kind of a statement to support it than that which had been just made to the House.

Mr HOBHOUSE stated, that it was in the contemplation of the Committee to visit the prison.

The motion was withdrawn.

On the 18th inst. the Lady Leys, Lyon, of Hull, and Lively, Ratt, of Aberdeen, were captured off Flamborough Head by a French cutter-built privateer armed with 16 guns, and afterwards retaken by the Eagle revenue cutter. It is said several other vessels have been taken.

The Continental news has now become extremely interesting. The French Directory has declared war against the Emperor, and also against the Grand Duke of Tuscany. Hostilities, according to one account, are already commenced in the country of the Grisons, on the borders of Switzerland, where the French claim a victory. In a few days we may expect to hear of an action between Jourdan's army, and that under the Archduke Charles. The campaigns that have past have been wo
